

You can help protect Wisconsin's fish and wildlife habitat and the outdoor sporting activities you enjoy by joining the Wisconsin Wildlife Federation.

The Wisconsin Wildlife Federation:

- Fights for the rights of sportsmen and women in Wisconsin to hunt, fish, and trap.
- Advocates for policies guaranteeing the right of access on public lands and streams for hunting, fishing, and trapping.
- Protects fish and wildlife habitat critically important for hunting, fishing, and trapping.
- Educates children and families about nature and conservation issues at the MacKenzie Environmental Center, one of the most diverse conservation education centers in Wisconsin.
- Advocates for strong policies supporting the Right to Bear Arms
- Promotes major legislative initiatives at the state level to protect our air, land, and water resources.
- Represents more than 100,000 sportspeople and outdoor enthusiasts.
- Is a member-supported, member-run organization.
- Is affiliated with the National Wildlife Federation and was named Affiliate of the Year in 2006.

You can help protect wildlife habitat and the interests of sportspeople by joining the Wisconsin Wildlife Federation. As a member, you'll become a part of a growing organization and strengthen WWF's ability to protect wildlife habitat and outdoor sporting activities. You'll also receive their newsletter which features articles about habitat and wildlife issues throughout the state.

To join right now, call their toll free number—1-800-897-4161. Please have your Master Card or Visa ready. You can join for $25, $50, $100, $250 or more. OR send in a check with the following form.
